track team overcomes losing streak

the track team wound up an extraordinary season by winning two meets. under the leadership of coach kirkpatrick, the team terminated their six-year losing streak. because of this determined leadership and outstanding teamwork, two school records were broken:

440 relay team: mike bryant, chris eckard, ronnie laxton, and thomas murphy -- time: 48.6

shot put: pether broman -- distance: 46'8"

the golf team tees off to a winning season the golf team wound up a successful '74 season by winning eight rounds, and losing only one. coach prushinski led the team to beat st. stephens, hildebran, and east lincoln twice, and fred t. foard once. after a close match, the team lost to maiden. at this year's monogram club banquet, ray kirby was named the team's most valuable player.

youth and inexperience take their toll coaches deal and kirby stated that youth and inexperience were the major drawbacks of last year's baseball team. the pitching staff, made up of reggie bumgarner, rick curtis, jonie triplett, and greg thomas, led the team to only three wins. they are, however, hoping for a more promising season next year.

at the end of the season, senior terry starnes was chosen by the coaching staff as the most valuable player of the 1974 baseball season. this versatile second baseman was selected for his leadership qualities and playing abilities.

kevin enjoys life in brasil in february 1974, kevin teague became the first a.f.s. student to represent granite falls abroad. kevin spent the year in caxias del sul, brasil. his host parents were guido and renée d'arrigo, who along with their children, marcos 19, mano 18, nelson 17, and edson 14, made kevin feel like a real brasilian.

kevin attended school on a monday through saturday basis and participated in a total of thirty-two classes. he won several medals in swimming and basketball. his basketball team competed in the third round of the inter-state championship. kevin, himself, averaged nineteen points and twelve rebounds per game.

"i have really enjoyed the past months in brasil, and i thank the a.f.s. for sending me to such a beautiful country."

as the last bell rang on june 6, hundreds of students left the campus to swim, play tennis, ride horses, and go to the beach. freedom was gained by all once more.

during the summer vacations, everyone was changed in some way. people returned to school different than they were before. there were changes everywhere. some seen; some unseen. as nature itself is changed by the cycle of the seasons, people are also changed.

*music is as close to us as during this transition period of our lives, music affects changes on our personalities. the driving beat of a hard rock song or the flowing rhythm of a soul melody can build us up with excitement or calm down our tense, pressured brains. by setting a mood within the song, the lyrics set our moods. the subtle moral behind the song makes small but meaningful changes on our easily molded characters. music is an important influence on us.

boy + girl = love

the students at granite falls high school spend much time with members of the opposite sex, finding this to be an exciting way to have a "good time." many couples go to the movies and to the village inn for a pizza afterwards. during football and basketball season boys find an exciting game a good excuse to hold their sweetheart's hand. on special occasions dances are sponsored that prove to be a welcome change from the usual dating routine. these are just a few examples of how couples spend their time together.

one of the many aspects of dating is the changing of partners. it would be interesting to observe a couple for a year and see how many different partners they date before/if they reunite. this variety is what makes love exciting.

working on a non-profit basis, the pebble is published here at the school. the corps of reporters cover school life throughout the day and toss in their work to ms. barbara jones, the faculty advisor, and kandy overcash, the editor. the staff meets each day during first period to combine their assignments to form the pebble.

annual staff rushes to meet deadlines publishing a year book is confusion, christmas deadlines, raising money, and working on saturdays after a ballgame. to condense a year of school life in a book involves layout, design, copywriting, and photography. selling advertisements and book subscriptions are a necessary part of a staffer's life.

what goes into publishing a book? the boulder staff is continually experimenting with new ideas in advertising, layout and design, copy writing, and photography. the staff uses originality and creativity to envelop the year of school life into the "boulder". leading the boulder staff are peter larson--editor, adele huffman--business manager.

top: the annual staff works together toward the completion of the book.

change: a way of growth nature has a peculiar way of refining the best possible methods necessary to sustain its existence. a prime example of one of these methods is the way it progresses or grows through change. simple seasonal changes result in growth: the deadness of winter is transformed to vital green in just a month's time. on a higher level, nature refines its creatures through the complex processes of evolution, a system based on change.

man takes notice of nature and tends to adopt its ways, ways that often prove to be very effective.

historically, man has grown from change. by slowly ridding himself of medieval superstitions, he has been able to expand his knowledge and advance, especially in the fields of medicine and science. individually, each person realizes the changes accompanying his maturing. change is surely and important influence on mankind.

as our school years approach their end, we are faced with a question: how to change the world? we notice problems crying for solutions. pollution, a problem resulting from technological growth and change, has become a dilemma unsolvable by scientists. will the answer come from granite falls? the field of medicine has been frequently referred to as a "new frontier" ready to be discovered and conquered. will a cancer cure be the result of research done by an alumnus of this school? as the world population climbs steadily, the puzzle of feeding the billions weighs ever heavier on our leaders' shoulders. will a former granite student made breakthroughs in food production processes? by changing our attitudes toward our co-workers and associates, and cooperating with each other, we can help change the world.

for many, school books are closing for the last times; for others, two to ten more years of education lie in the future. regardless of the direction we follow, changes are and will be felt in our lives. our childhoods are over--we must believe that the world can be molded like a piece of clay into something practical yet vibrant and beautiful.

there used to be never-ending, love filled days when i was a child . . . the sun rose and its rays drifted into my window and splashed across the floor . . .

i was not aware then that happiness was merely a fleeting thing . . . i went on long walks through the woods down to the creek . . . my brother played "army" . . . and we used to pretend that there were buried treasures hidden in the gully behind my grandparent's house . . . those were the days when being a child was my main occupation . . .

presently the days of elementary school came along . . . jangling bells and printing block letters across a paper was a new challenge . . . and weekends became cherished as a time of freedom . . . sunday afternoons were spent with cousins and mud pies were made with the skill of a gourmet chef . . .

eventually the simple joys were forgotten . . . different things came into life . . . such as a snowy night in the mountains, shouts at basketball games . . . there were friends to be made and become treasured . . . a first love became more and more remembered . . . the odors of incense and the colors of flashing lights were familiar with smoky atmospheres . . . whispers in a classroom disturbed my inner silence . . . walking along the ocean's edge was walking with god . . .

perhaps the memories of thanksgiving turkeys and christmas cakes have been forgotten . . . maybe if i still had a bicycle to ride on long dirt roads i could return to childhood . . .

but the seasons change more swiftly now; they still come and go every year . . . and i sit under the trees in the school yard and think back on soaring airplanes and crashing oceans . . . laughter and tears are things to be cherished . . .

and the summer vacations will always come and go . . . students will sleep in classes just as i have . . . books will close time and time again . . . and my friends and i will become memories for other people, making it necessary to look back now; to remember the days when i didn't know that autumn leaves fell dead . . . that they were crushed and trampled just as easily as my childhood memories . . .
